Research Projects

LIQUID, ENZYME- HYDROLYZED PROTEIN SUPPLEMENT STUDY (2004-2005)

The primary objective of this study was to determine the response of pressure ulcer healing to doses of liquid, enzyme-hydrolyzed protein supplement. Study Investigators include Becky Dorner, RD, LD, Kwon Lee, MD and Mary Ellen Posthauer, RD, CD. Statistical analysis was conducted by Kay Wolf, PhD, RD of Ohio State University. Subjects were recruited from multiple nursing homes within Indiana, Ohio, New Jersey and New York. Adult subjects who meet all eligibility criteria are enrolled into the study. The goal was a total of 120 subjects (60 in each group – control and treatment). The experiment followed a daily treatment, randomized subject, convenience multi-centered design. Subjects assigned to the treatment are provided 15 grams of protein through 45 mL of liquid, enzyme-hydrolyzed protein supplement three times per day by nursing. Once a week, and every other week for 8 weeks, healing rate measurement of the pressure area was conducted: subjectively by one of the research assistants on clinical basis (utilize the PUSH Tool, copyrighted by National Pressure Ulcer Advisory Panel); pressure-area tracings performed independently by the research assistants; and photographic assessment. Results indicated significantly better PUSH scores in the subjects receiving the supplement versus those on standardized care. Results were published in March 2006 in Advances in Skin & Wound Care.

VALIDATION OF THE ADA/CD-HCF NUTRITION RISK ASSESSMENT (2004-2005)

This study was conducted by CD-HCF a dietetics practice group of the American Dietetic Association. The study involved validation of a tool developed by CD-HCF and ADA members to identify nutritional risk and help practitioners to determine appropriate nutritional interventions for their long term care residents. The study was conducted in facilities across the country utilizing RDs who were willing to assist in the validation. Becky Dorner & Associates' staff participated in the study.

UNINTENTIONAL WEIGHT LOSS INTERVENTION UTILIZING FORTIFIED FOOD METHOD (1993)

Subjects were selected from nursing facilities based on significant or severe unintentional weight loss. Subjects were placed on the Nutrition Intervention Program, an enhanced food program which provided an additional 1200 calories and 15 grams of protein daily over and above their normal diet (from high calorie/protein foods, not supplements). Implementation of this program reduced the total weight loss in each facility from 10% of residents each month, to 1-2%. As a result of this study, educational seminars were developed and presented, and a book was published entitled, "Diet Plus: A Nutrition Intervention Program for High Risk Residents."

AFFECTS OF PUREED DIETS ON LONG TERM CARE RESIDENTS (1989)

The study included a review of residents on pureed diets, interviews with staff, residents and families; current meal intake percentage and supplements ordered; food preparation and food service methods. Results indicated that 40% of consumed calories were from supplements; there were no standardized pureed recipes available or in use. Pureed foods were prepared randomly and were often too thin (diluting nutritional value). Acceptance was poor, food was often wasted, and staff refused to feed the residents what they perceived as standard food; so they gave the residents supplements instead. As a result of this study, an educational seminar was developed and presented in multiple locations; a book was published (originally Puree Pizzazz, now updated to include all levels of dysphagia and entitled, It's Tough to Swallow: Nutrition and Dining for Dysphagia) including a set of 80 standardized recipes, and standardized instructions for preparing meats, vegetables, fruits, casseroles, etc.
